Artist statement

Sabrina is an fine-art photographer inspired by nature and our deep connection to it. Her images bring to light what wants to be seen from within, serving as an expression of her own inner feelings and a reflection of universal human experiences. She doesn't shy away from sensitive topics, using her work as a way to spark conversation around themes that can often feel uncomfortable yet resonate with many.

“I see my work as a way to connect people,” she explains. “Through my photography, I open up conversations about difficult subjects by exploring personal themes that are, at the same time, universally understood.”

Over the past year, she has increasingly embraced analog photography. The stillness and slowness of this process feel liberating to her, bringing her closer to her emotions and, ultimately, to the essence of her work.

Her recent series, Untamed Spirit, is a reflection on the themes of identity, freedom, and the profound journey of self-discovery. At its core, it explores the duality many face: the external pressures of societal expectations versus the inner drive for authenticity and liberation. This tension symbolizes the ongoing struggle between conforming to norms and embracing one's true nature.

Using analog photography, Sabrina captures the raw beauty of her subjects, inviting viewers to reflect on their own inner journeys.

Untamed Spirit II

The horses symbolize the duality of identity—the visible and invisible layers, the conscious and unconscious—and how we learn to see ourselves through the reflection of something or someone else. Identity emerges in this delicate balance, where we discover ourselves through the relationships and experiences that shape us.

This analog photograph was captured with a Rolleicord camera, with manual exposure and focus enhancing the authenticity and craftsmanship of the work.

Untamed Spirit III

What shapes identity? And is your identity a fixed concept? Untamed Spirit invites you to reflect on your own identity and explore how you can free yourself from limiting beliefs, with the ultimate goal of complete self-acceptance.

This image was created entirely in analog using a Rolleicord camera and roll film, without any digital manipulation. It features a 'triple exposure,' where the film was exposed three times, adding depth and complexity to the composition.

Untamed Spirit IV

In a sudden, instinctive motion, the horse breaks through the moment — untamed, unfiltered. This image captures identity in its purest essence: revealed not through form, but through reaction. Part of the Untamed Spirit series, it speaks to the shedding of imposed layers and the return to something deeply true. A reminder that who we are is not always found in stillness, but often in the raw, unguarded spaces between control and release.

Untamed Spirit V

Untamed Spirit reflects the ongoing search for identity and the balance between who we are and how we are seen. The interplay between sharpness and blur symbolizes the shifting clarity of self-insight and the influence of external expectations.

The tension between light and darkness highlights the struggle between conformity and authenticity. This work invites the viewer to break free from limitations and embrace their own untamed core.

Untamed Spirit V

Untamed Spirit explores the ongoing search for identity and the subtle balance between our authentic selves and the standards we are expected to meet.

The strength and grace of the horse embody the essence of freedom and self-expression. Its movement radiates both control and surrender, symbolizing the balance between instinct and composure

Untamed Spirit invites you to let go of boundaries and follow your own path. It is an ode to inner strength and the courage to be yourself.
